UNFOLDS A TERRIBLE TALE

Captain Returning From Voyage to the Terrid Zone Has Story of Wonderful Experience.

A terrible tale of the torrid zone was unfolded by Capt. R. H. Torrible the other day on the arrival of the steamer Deula, which plies between New York and Manaoia, a port about 1,000 miles up the Amazon river. The skipper vowed by marine and other saints that never had he seen sights so strange, according to the New York Times.

On a river which empties into the Amazon, near Manaoia, he said he saw myriads of electric eels so strongly charged with electricity that the broad bosom of the stream was flooded with light and the crew were able to read their pocket Bibles by the glow, which was estimated at 40 watts per eel. When seamen brought some of these high-voltage eels on deck, Captain Torrible said, the ship's dynamo were short circuited and there was the dickens to pay until the eels were disconnected.

But Skipper Torrible hadn't finished. While the Deula was tied up at the pier, a boy who was working with a loading gang fell into the river. The luminous eels surged around him, and when he was picked up he was dead. A physician who examined the body said that the lad was the victim of an electric overcharge. Captain Torrible brought back with him a sun-dogging monkey, which prowled only at night. He declared that the simian, like an owl, was casual and apathetic by day, but when the sun went over the horizon the monkey had 20-20 eyes and was an ultra-lively stepper. The captain took newspaper men into his cabin, where the pet was kept, and pulled down the shades. The sun dodger reacted to the gloom by appropriating and immediately eating a straw Kelly recently purchased at considerable outlay by one of the reporters.

The skipper said that he had purchased a Brazilian sloth to bring back to the United States, but the animal was too lazy to eat and died on the way here.

"A tailor's life is one of great temptation," said the man who runs a clothing pressing and repairing establishment on upper Broadway. "Few people realize how many valuables and the quantity of currency come into a tailor's possession through the negligence of his customers. A man sending his suit to the tailor just does not seem to be able to remove everything from the pockets. In the last year I have found everything from an indorsed check for $500 to a bottle of a once common beverage. Among other things that have come into this shop in the pockets of men's clothes in the past year are currency, police passes, stocks, bonds and other valuable securities, enough cigarette cases to start a shop of my own, matches, coupons, handkerchiefs, fountain pens, pencils, fraternity pins, lodge buttons, wallets, card cases, watches, knives, and scores of other such articles which men commonly carry."—New York Sun.

Telephone for the Deaf.

The "Phonophor," for people hard of hearing, is the smallest telephone yet produced. It is about an inch long, and its open end being inserted in the ear, is held there by its shape, no strap being necessary. It is adjustable for maximum clearness. The usual membrane could not be employed, and a piece of specially treated skin with a bit of iron in its center is substituted.
